Accessing and using classrooms

- The recipient of the key is registered using the EAMT contactless smart card.
- During unscheduled times, classrooms are provided to EAMT students for practice for periods up to two hours on the basis of electronic queuing. If the room remains vacant after the end of the two-hour period, an extension can be obtained from the administrator.
- If there are people waiting to use the classroom, the key must be returned.
- At the end of a lesson or practice session, the classroom door must be locked and the key returned to the administrator without delay.
- If there is a break in practice, for example to visit the library or the canteen, the classroom key must be left with the administrator. If you are not in the classroom, don't keep the key!
- People from outside the EAMT can use the premises only with a special permit and in accordance with a lease agreement for the premises.
- After leaving a room, all its equipment must be left in their original position. A stand borrowed from another room must be left in the corridor after use.
- It is forbidden for anyone to enter a classroom when it is being used for a lesson or practice session without compelling reason.
- The rooms accessible by smart card have video surveillance (see also the section on cameras).
- The temperature controllers on the heaters in the classrooms and offices of the Concert and Theatre Hall must not be touched. The indoor climate can be adjusted from the digital touch panel next to the door. When leaving the room, the temperature display must be set again to 21C. Windows must not be opened.
- In the rooms of the Academy building on Rävåla puiestee, the windows may be opened and the temperature controllers for the heaters adjusted, but when leaving the room, the windows must always be closed and the temperature controller set to "3". This ensures the preservation of our musical instruments and respects the work of instrument maintenance staff.
- When leaving the room, please turn off the lights.

Good conduct

- Those staying in the buildings of the EAMT follow the generally accepted standards of conduct and the laws of the Republic of Estonia.
- Good conduct includes friendliness, care and vigilance, cleanliness and tidiness.

- If there are instructional signs in the room (e.g. a prohibition on entering in outdoor shoes), they must be followed.
- Anyone losing or destroying EAMT property will be held responsible and must repair or compensate for the damage (section 132 of the Law of Obligations Act).

- The administrator must be notified immediately of any property damage.

- Applications for concerts can be submitted by EAMT students and lecturers to the Concert and Performance Office twice a year: in autumn and spring. Concerts and related hall rehearsals are reserved by the Concert and Performance Office.
- The manager of the performance halls handles bookings for events held by external event organisers and agreements covering the conditions for such events (saalikompleks@eamt.ee).

- Once an event has been confirmed and the corresponding entry has been made in the room reservation system, it is mandatory to add the main details of the event (start time, break, rehearsal schedule, etc.) and information about additional needs (technical needs, rider, supplies, piano, additional cleaning, etc.) within reasonable time, but not later than one week before the event.
